

Three-Sixty Advisory Group Appoints Health Care Industry Veteran Ron Spoltore as Managing Director

PASADENA, CA—(Apr 3, 2008) – Three-Sixty Advisory Group, LLC, (Three-Sixty) a business accelerator for emerging health care and medical technology companies, has named veteran health-care professional Ron Spoltore as managing director. With more than 30 years of health-care leadership experience, Spoltore has a national reputation for his expertise in strategy and business development, operational improvement analysis, financial and acquisition analysis as well as revenue cycle outsourcing, information technology, business plan development and business process re-engineering.

“Ron’s expertise in building, managing and advising health-care companies makes him a valuable asset to our growing company,” said John G. Nackel, Ph.D., chairman and chief executive officer of Three-Sixty. “Working together, we will advance our mission to accelerate the success of our health care and medical technology clients.”

Prior to joining Three-Sixty Advisory Group, Spoltore was senior vice president of customer operations for Eclipsys Corporation, an information technology services company serving the health-care industry. Before Eclipsys, he served as group vice president of global services for the medical solutions division of Siemens A.G., where he was responsible for a multi-billion dollar division that provided consulting, product implementation, customer training and support, and outsourcing services to health-care organizations in 12 countries. Earlier, Spoltore spent 16 years leading health-care consulting practices for Kenneth Leventhal & Co. and KPMG Peat Marwick. He began his health-care career as a business analyst at the 1,100-bed Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, where he worked with IBM Corporation on the development and implementation of the first hospital-wide information system.

“Three-Sixty understands that rapid business success is critical for today’s emerging health care and medical technology companies,” said Spoltore. “I look forward to bringing the company’s unique approach to clients, for the benefit of patients, the market and investors.”
